1. The large depots situated south of Kazanlik were built in the shape of tunnels by the Bulgarians after the occupation of the country by the Russians. The depots have now been handed over to the Soviets, who during May and June were busy stocking them with war materials.
2. The Soviet garrison at Kazanlik is about 500 strong. It carries out patrol duty in the town at night, and sometimes during the day. In addition, there are about 1,000 Soviet civilians, consisting chiefly of specialists who work at the arsenal, and demobilized officers and aviators.
3. At Tulovo there are no Soviet troops.
4. Part of the Soviet troops stationed at Plovdiv left in July to take part in maneuvers. There remained, however, some artillery and tank troops in Pirinchlik, near Plovdiv.
5. Eight small tanks with anti-aircraft guns were recently seen at Graf Ignatiyef. There is also a truck park at Graf Ignatiyef, with about 200 trucks
6. The new underground depots at Sopot have also been handed over to the Russians, who are filling them with war material.
